

How to Pirouette

An interesting Information Architecture group project, we were to find a talent of one person in the group that the other ones did not share. This person was to teach the others how to perform this task, and we photographed and documented to whole process. Using that, we were to simplify the motions of the action into a clear, precise diagram meant for someone completely new to the action.

Our group worked with the ballet move of pirouetting, and as you can imagine, me and a fellow male learning this move was equally hilarious, saddening, and succesful in making our final diagram clear.
